

The Need For Planning

Making your own funeral plans will help your survivors make decisions and control costs when you die. Grieving families without plans are ill prepared to select funeral goods and services or make sound decisions about funeral or memorial ceremonies. Pressed for decisions, they often buy more costly and elaborate funerals than they would if plans were in place and family discussions had determined what was and was not wanted.

The Funeral Consumers Alliance of the Finger Lakes, Inc.

The FCAFL is a nonprofit public-service organization that serves the southern Finger Lakes region, informing members and the public about funeral planning, practices, and costs.

The Alliance is run by volunteers and financed entirely by tax-deductible donations. It is a 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization and a member of the national Funeral Consumers Alliance, Inc., a federation of consumer information organizations (website: www.funerals.org).

Purposes of the Alliance

- Promote consumer education and protection with regard to funeral-related issues.
- Encourage people to plan for their own final disposition.
- Assist members and their families and the general public in making plans for funeral arrangements at reasonable cost.
- Increase the opportunity for individuals to determine the type of funeral they desire.

Programs and activities

- Funeral planning seminars and workshops.
- Help for individuals needing reliable information about funeral matters.
- Publicity about funeral-related issues.
- Publication of funeral price surveys for the southern Finger Lakes region.
- Support for legislation that benefits funeral consumers, and opposition to legislation designed to benefit funeral businesses at the expense of consumers.

Benefits of membership

- Welcome packets with end-of-life and funeral-planning information, including planning forms that when filled out will provide families with specific instructions about desired funeral arrangements.

- The Alliance Newsletter, published twice a year—information about death-care planning and customs and about the funeral industry from a consumer's perspective.
- Access to benefits of membership in affiliates of the national Funeral Consumers Alliance throughout the U.S. This access can help if you move or die away from home.
- The satisfaction of supporting an organization committed to consumer education and protection.
- Peace of mind knowing that you have made it easier for survivors to make arrangements at the time of your death.

Service opportunities for members

- Funeral planning presentations
- Funeral price survey: collection of price lists, extraction and publication of price data
- Monitoring the website and email discussion list of the national Funeral Consumers Alliance for developments of interest to consumers in the Finger Lakes region
- Monitoring the progress of state legislation that affects funeral consumers; alerting the Board of Directors to needed action
- Contacting legislators about funeral-consumer issues
- Newsletter preparation: writing articles, editing, layout
- Placing Alliance brochures in public sites, senior living facilities, etc.
- Participation in policy and activity decisions by serving on the Board of Directors
- Member mailings
- Website maintenance

When A Death Occurs

It is important for your survivors to know your wishes and your chosen funeral home.

- (1) Make sure that the people who will have responsibility for your final disposition have copies of your funeral planning documents.
- (2) When an Alliance member dies, call a funeral home, not the FCAFL. A funeral director will fill out a death certificate and obtain a doctor's certification of the death.
- (3) Then call family members, lawyer, minister, priest, or rabbi as appropriate.
- (4) The funeral director will confer with the survivors, give them a copy of the General Price List of the funeral home, and help them set up a contract for desired goods and services. In New York State the involvement of a funeral director in the final disposition of a deceased person is required by law.

Authority for disposition of remains. A person can specify who will have the authority to make decisions about the disposition of his or her body after death. A form for this purpose is available at the website of the New York State Public Health Department. If a deceased person did not specify who would have this authority, then the priority set by law begins with the spouse or domestic partner of the deceased and continues with any surviving child at least 18 years old, either surviving parent, any sibling, a guardian, or an appointed fiduciary.

Memorial or funeral ceremony. Survivors arrange for a memorial or funeral ceremony or celebration of a person's life, if any observance is desired. A ceremony can occur before or after the final disposition of the deceased person, at a place that the survivors choose.

Obituaries. Survivors pay for obituary notices in newspapers. The price per printed line can be obtained by calling the newspaper. The Alliance website has guidelines for content of obituaries.

Anatomical Gifts

A person who plans to donate his or her body to a medical institution or tissue bank should pre-register with the receiving organization. If you have made such an arrangement, then put the name and contact information for the receiving organization on your funeral planning form.

A person whose plan is for either organ donation or body donation must have a back-up plan that can be used if the chosen anatomical gift program cannot accept the donation.

In some circumstances the survivors of a deceased person can arrange for donation of the body even if the person did not make advance arrangements.

Two medical schools near the Finger Lakes region have anatomical gift programs:

SUNY Upstate Medical University, Anatomical Gift Program, 760 Irving Ave., Rm. 1133, Syracuse, NY 13210 (315-464-4348).

University of Rochester Medical Center, Anatomical Gift Program, Box 603, 601 Elmwood Avenue, Rochester, NY 14642 (585-275-2592).
www.urmc.rochester.edu/anatomical/gift.aspx

It is necessary to pay a funeral home to transport a body from the southern Finger Lakes area to Syracuse or Rochester.

Anatomical gifts can also be made, at no cost, to tissue banks that serve hospitals and medical teaching and research institutions. Two organizations available to donors in central New York State are: Finger Lakes Donor Recovery Network (1-800-810-5494, www.donorrecovery.org) and International Institute for the Advancement of Medicine (1-800-486-4426, www.iiam.org).
